

Psychological Analysis

As a part of Yukthi HR club activity, various skill tests were conducted among the students through the structured questionnaires. These questionnaires were designed to test the different emotional and psychological status, Stress level, conflict resolution ability, negotiation skills, leadership qualities, team building capabilities among students and testing the motivational level of students etc. One of the interesting tests was conducted among the students was, testing of various ego status like child ego, parent ego and adult ego. The result was approximately 70% of students present were proven to be in adult ego status, 20% were proven to be in child ego status and the remaining in parent ego. Though the testing was just empirical, students were interested in making their participation actively.

For the freshers in the organizational behavior class there was a psychological testing on values and value rankings among the students of MBA BU. There was a drastic difference among the students when the result was analyzed. It was found that the present generation students give first preference for family and the next value is for friends and money. We are also trying to give a shape to this result in the form of newspaper article.
